

Note to the Teacher

If the game is to be used as a distance learning lesson, there is no need to do the cutting and lamination as their return condition will probably mean some cards are missing, pages folded or torn, etc.

In each packet, provide the 4 pages from which they are to make the board, 9 pages of questions, 1 page of box templates, and 1 glossary sheet. It will be necessary for you to duplex the cards for them.

Students can do the assembly, rather than you doing so many.

Students can play at home with siblings or parents or 2 -3 classmates.

Since the board and questions provide such a great amount of data to be learned, playing the game multiple times is a distinct advantage.

You should make sets to be used in class and they should be laminated as the instructions indicate.

Usually a game is used as a review of content presented in class, but this is one game that does the presenting as well.
